

[e1] Violent video games do not themselves cause people to act out violently.

[e2] Video games may contribute to the overall mindset of a violent person who acts out violently,

[e3] but cannot in and of themselves cause violence.

[e4] A violent person will seek out justification and violence in whatever forms exist.

[e5] Violent video games can also contribute to the normalization and desensitization of violence,

[e6] but is only one factor among a whole host of factors leading to violence, the most important of which is individual choice.
