

[e1] I think that, to some extent, romantic movies can leave an impression on viewers about what they think their real life relationships should be.

[e2] Most people can tell the difference between reality and movies,

[e3] but seeing perfect fictional relationships can give people false expectations.

[e4] They may wish they had that in their real lives even though it was obviously written for entertainment purposes.

[e5] Yes, the expectations raised by romantic movies are damaging to real relationships.

